Food Vendors Receive Typhoid Fever Vaccine

A number of food vendors operating within the Accra Metropolis have been vaccinated against Typhoid Fever. This is a good move as it will go long way to promote good health among the vendors and the consuming public.

Cervical Cancer Screening Records Low PatronageAs only 3% of women are screened so far

Grave concerns have been expressed by key players within the health industry about the lack of interest among women to go for cervical cancer screening in the country.

Current statistics show that only 3 per cent of women in Ghana have so far been screened for the condition.

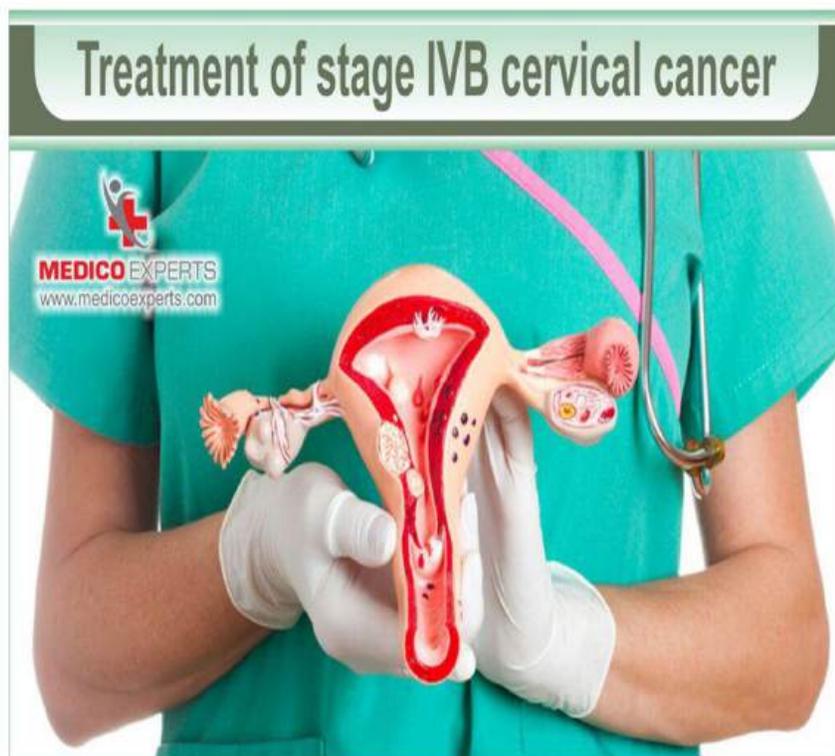

Calls have therefore been made on regulatory bodies to increase access to screening services, especially for those living in rural communities.

Dr. Wallace Odiko Ollenu, Programme Manager incharge of Non-Communicable Disease at the Ghana Health Service (GHS), who recently led an awareness creation campaign on cervical cancer screening, said most women, especially, those in the rural areas are shying away from being screened for the disease, adding that, many more people are still unaware of the dangers associated with the condition.

To this end, women are being encouraged to visit any healthcare facility to get themselves screened early enough because treatment in the early stages is more effective than when it gets to an advanced stage.

Meanwhile, about 1.9m girls have been vaccinated against the disease with the Greater Accra Region recording the lowest patronage due to misinformation.

Cervical cancer simply means cancer of the cervix and it is caused by the Human Papilloma Virus (HPV). The mode of transmission is mainly through sex

Signs and symptoms of cervical cancer

According to health experts, even though cervical cancer does not show signs and symptoms during the early stages, symptoms such as offensive vaginal discharge, bleeding after sex, general bodily weakness and abdominal pains are some signs and symptoms of the disease.

Crystal News is reiterating calls on every woman to get screened because life is too precious to lose it through cervical cancer.
